

2 transmission line, comprising:

4 determining the electrical characteristics of a signal path along the signal transmission line; and

6 adjusting the dimensions of the signal path in order to cancel unwanted 8 electrical characteristics of the signal transmission line, wherein length and width of a portion of the signal path at which a parasitic element is present are 10 adjusted identically on the input and output sides of the parasitic element.
